

MARKET MICROSTRUCTURE Confronting Many Viewpoints

6th to 10th december 2010
Paris

Dear Colleague,

We thought you might be interested in attending an ambitious 5-day international conference on “Market Microstructure: confronting many viewpoints”, which will take place in Paris during the week 6th to 10th of December 2010.

The idea is to confront ideas that have blossomed in different communities (economics, financial mathematics, econometrics; computer science and (econo)-physics) in the past decade. In order to foster this confrontation and ease communication, we have gathered in Paris scientists and researchers from these different communities, including professionals, and ask them to give introductory tutorials, reviewing both their recent activity and the problems that, in their eyes, are most relevant to address in the near future. We are convinced that this event will be a unique opportunity to learn about recent research trends in finance.

We target around 150 participants, partly in the prestigious premises of Palais Brongniart (the historical Paris Bourse). More information about the conference, with a list of speakers, preliminary program and registration form, can be found at the following site <http://market-microstructure.institutlouisbachelier.org>

We hope that you will be able to join us.

Best regards,

The organisation committee

F Abergel, JP Bouchaud, Th Foucault, C. Lehalle and M Rosenbaum
