Community Service Learning (CSL) Award CALL FOR 2011 APPLICATIONS

The purpose of the Community Service Learning Award is to encourage faculty to design a new course or enhance an existing course using a Community Service Learning (CSL) framework. This aligns with Western's commitment to innovative, high quality undergraduate and graduate education.

Community Service Learning courses can take many forms, including:

- Individual student placements with local nonprofit organizations
- Group projects with local nonprofit organizations
- Community-based research projects
- International student placements or group projects with nonprofit agencies

Awarded by Community Service Learning @ Western within The Student Success Centre, the Community Service Learning (CSL) Award aims to support faculty in creating opportunities for students to connect academic course content with meaningful community service that contributes to student learning, and local and international community development. Two awards, up to $2000 each, will be awarded in 2011.
