

The Department of Economics Distinguished Lecture

Structural Change and Declining Agricultural Productivity: Evidence from Sub-Saharan Africa

A Lecture by Dr. Christopher Udry

Robert E. and Emily King Professor, Northwestern University

Wednesday, March 27, 2024

3:00 pm - 4:30 pm

McKellar Room, University Community Centre

Reception to follow at The Wave

Professor Chris Udry is a development economist whose research focuses on rural economic activity in Sub-Saharan Africa, including work on technological change, risk and financial markets, gender and households, property rights, psychological well-being and economic decision-making as well as a variety of other aspects of rural economic organization.

